

Crossing the Rubicon: The Guardian Project (Dangerous Visions of Tomorrow) (Volume 3)

Machines make faster, better, more accurate decisions than humans. They deal with facts, not emotions and they never disobey. Or do they? When Dr. Lewis Glen set out to create Guardian - a decision making supercomputer, he had all the best intentions. Unfortunately as the army and the government take over the project, things quickly get out of hand. On top of it all there is a growing movement protesting against Guardian, whatever his use. It was January 49 BC, Caesar was staying in the northern Italian city of Ravenna and he had a decision to make. Either he acquiesced to the Senates command or he moved southward to confront Pompey and plunge the Roman Republic into a bloody civil war. An ancient Roman law forbade any general from crossing the Rubicon River and entering Italy proper with a standing army. To do so was treason. This tiny stream would reveal Caesars intentions. The idiom Crossing the Rubicon means to pass a point of no return.
